21/25	Presentation: Assessing Carbon Emissions	Helen Bailey & Emma Pye on behalf of ADEPT
	This work is part of ADEPT/FHRG research programme to develop guidance for assessing carbon emissions. There are currently several ways of measuring so the aim is to develop a consistent approach. FHRG members will be able to take part in a survey to for bench marking.
	General discussion about previous occasions adept have looked at Carbon. Ian Walsh thought Street Lighting would be a focus and asked if it would be again. General agreement that it is important and the greatest use of electricity in most authorities.
	John Grimes stated that Enfield replaced 22k street lights with LED's which was a 58% saving in energy. The carbon saving also relates to how electricity is purchased.
	Keith Field – Aspect calculator is used for asphalt but seems to be used in different ways. Helen Bailey need to find a document everyone is happy to work with and all use it in the same way.
	John Booth – there is a CEN standard would that be suitable?

	Andy Stevenson – in Cornwall the local granite is light reflecting as it contains mica. Also is aware of a trial in Newquay using broken mirrors but it wasn't durable as glass didn't coat well.
